Here's a hobby that provides lots of exposure

By Suzanne Sproul

E.L. Dick keeps the fruits of his time-consuming labors in cardboard boxes.

"I've got four or five huge cardboard boxes full of 'em. They can be expensive. Those represent a lot of time and money and the funny thing is that when we die the kids will probably throw them all out," Dick said with a shrug of his shoulders.

What Dick keeps in cardboard boxes stored in any available space in his Upland home are photos steeped with memories.

What else would the avid Euclid Avenue Camera Club member collect in his retirement?

"I think I like photography because I can't draw flies," he said with a smile.

Dick and his wife, Florene, spend their free time traveling throughout the country on vacations. And most everywhere they go, so go their cameras.

"I like the outdoors shots. We were just back East and able to take shots of the changing of the seasons. We got those just before it started to snow," he said.

W.B. and Joyce Van Dusen of Ontario share the interest in photography. The husband and wife have been members of the club for the past 20 years.

"I've got 10,000 slides myself and he's got another 10,000 of his own. I don't know what we'll ever do with that many," Mrs. Van Dusen said.

"Every now and then I have to go through and weed some of them out. You can just get too many," her husband said. "It's just a hobby but we have a lot of fun."

Some of that fun includes club field trips to such picturesque spots as Bishop, Calico and the Huntington Library/Museum and regular competitions among members. "I like the competition. It's something to do and lots of fun to win," Van Dusen said, who admits his family already has boxes full of award-winning ribbons. "You always like to win more. And then there's the challenge of doing better."

Video arcades off limits during school hours

By Candysse Miller

The word is out at James Games Family Fun Center: If you're under 17 you're not going to be playing Space Invaders before 3 p.m.

With its location across from Upland High School, the video arcade may rely even more heavily on a youthful clientele than its competitors.

But as of Nov. 16, a sheet of paper posted to the window warned video whiz kids that stepping inside the business could put them outside the law.

A new Upland city ordinance restricting children under 17 years old from patronizing video arcades during regular school hours went into effect that day.

At James Games, few people

"Some of them have even brought mother's notes but we tell them still, 'Then you're going to have to go home. You can't be here.'" tested their skills at the arcade's games during the early afternoon. Even fewer of them were in their teens.

—Shelly Medina

Part of the reason for the lackluster business could be that employees at the video arcade were checking to see if all of their patrons were at least 17 years old.

"He asked me if I was 17 and I said 'yeah,'" said one James Games patron, an Upland High School student who asked not to be identified.

Across the street, his school mates were standing on the athletic fields wearing their physical education class clothes.

Management at James Games could not be reached to comment about whether the ordinance would affect their business, but at least one arcade didn't require any prompting to impose the new law.

At the Upland Family Fun Center on Seventh Street, management already had laid down the law about teen-agers cutting class to practice Pac Man.

"When they come in (during school hours), we ask them why they're not in school," said Family Fun Center office manager Shelly Medina. "Some of them have even brought mother's notes but we tell them still, 'Then you're going to have to go home. You can't be here.'"

The arcade's policy is to ask young-looking patrons if they are 17 years old. In some cases, they will check identification, she said.

Medina said that the policy may cut slow business somewhat, but "the owners are real into family and school."

With school out early Nov. 16 for parent-teacher meetings, the miniature golf course and video arcade was letting children in during the early afternoon.

The thought of being locked out of the arcades annoyed some of the young video players.

"I don't think that's good because they'll leave us on the street when we could be in here," said 11-year-old El Camino Elementary School student Ricky Harden. "They could be making more money."

Upland officials say that they could also be in school, however.

Both Harden and his friend, 12-year-old Floyd DePriest, said

Bids to be taken on urgent life care study

By Lee Peterson

The prospect of Foothill Fire Protection District paramedics was kept alive as the governing board agreed recently to accept bids on an in-depth study of a urgent life care program.

But directors first may ask the voters of Rancho Cucamonga if they are willing to pay for an expensive paramedic program before they spend more money on studies.

Foothill board member Kurt Latipow argued that while the district should go to the polls, a vote shouldn't be conducted until the study has been completed and all information uncovered.

An earlier paramedic study commissioned last summer provided the district with approximate cost figures on various paramedic program options.

At least two of the Foothill directors are willing to commission a more detailed cost analysis of the engine company paramedic option, but had to settle last week for the opening of bids.

The board was unanimous in directing the Foothill staff to develop a request for proposals. The cost of the more detailed study has been estimated at that they never skipped class to play video games and were only at the arcade because school let out early that day.

Children who avoid class and hang around video arcades will be dealt with by both police and school officials. Citations and fines await the business owners who let truants loiter in their stores, say police.

Police also hope that the possibility of accumulating fines may encourage some business owners to adopt the ordinance quickly.

Although police made no checks of local video game businesses Nov. 16, Upland police Lt. Robert Beringer said that officers may randomly survey local video businesses.

"We're going to be checking on it periodically," he said.

L.A. chorale teaches students music history

By Marianne Aiken

Eight members of the Los Angeles Master Chorale converted rock tunes into Gregorian chants recently to teach Bear Gulch Elementary School students about the history of music.

Using the hit tune, "Kyrie Eleison" — Latin for "Lord have mercy" — the singers demonstrated how it may have sounded if the group Mr. Mister had recorded it 1,500 years ago.

"I'm trying to give them a base," said Dale Jergenson, director of the Outreach Program of the Los Angeles Music Chorale. "Without that base, everything is just rock 'n' roll. Where did rock 'n' roll come from? It's a very valid part of music."

The full chorale has 143 members and performs regularly at Los Angeles' Dorothy Chandler Pavilion.

The smaller group is touring Southern California in an effort to bring music back to the classroom. In addition to the performances, Jergenson gives workshops for teachers to show them how to integrate music into other classes.

The group did two assemblies at Bear Gulch that day, followed by a workshop for teachers in the afternoon.

"Music is an integral part of life," Jergenson said. "We're trying to bring it back, rather than taking it out and dusting it once a year."

The tour is part of a pilot program funded by the El Paso Natural Gas Company Partners in Art Learning program, to foster enhanced relationships between the cultural community and public and private schools.

In budget crunches, music classes seem to be the first to go, Jergenson lamented.

"Somehow we manage to keep fingerprinting, but lose music."

Music can be integrated into history, architecture, math and science classes, Jergenson said.

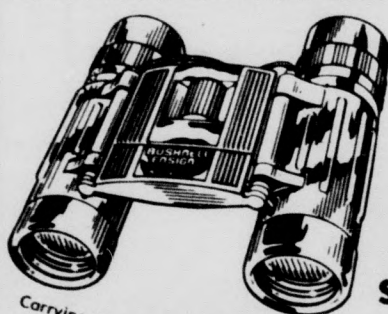

For instance, the evolution of four-part music during the Renaissance period could be tied in with the expansion of man's knowledge due to the improvements in transportation during that time, Jergenson said.

The Baroque period followed, introducing five-part music and coinciding with the exploration of the New World.

"The whole idea is to give kids a continuum of music experience and to give teachers some sources," Jergenson said.

Upland fee increase ordinance nears

By Candysse Miller

It took a marathon meeting to accomplish the task, but members of Upland's City Council and Chamber of Commerce say that they have — for the most part — ironed out their differences on a proposed ordinance to increase fees for city services.

By 1:30 a.m. Nov. 17, the two groups had agreed to try to complete the public hearing process on the sticking points of the proposal: discrepancies between city fire and building departments' inspection figures and fee tallies for the Parks and Recreation Department's budget.

The meeting was continued in a special public hearing this past Monday at the Upland City Council chambers.

After hashing out details of the proposal for more than four hours, the council decided early the morning of Nov. 17 to come back with more information Nov. 23 when they were to hold a special meeting on the matter.

Fire and Building department officials will be preparing additional information to try to identify whether there are any discrepancies or duplications of their inspections, said Assistant City Manager Mike Matlock.

Members of the Chamber of Commerce had questioned whether building and sprinkler system inspections were duplicated by the two departments and whether fire department overtime calculated into the city's cost survey unjustifiably inflated fee figures.

"A lot of our questions are about the Fire Department and overtime, and they (the council) said that they had some difficulty with it also," said Tony Malone, the chamber's executive director.

Members of the chamber have been at odds with the council over the proposed ordinance, complaining that the council was trying to steamroll a measure before anyone had a chance to research it. Opponents also complained that taxpayers would face unreasonably high fee increases.

Chamber members said that they wanted to see the study used not only to save general fund monies, but also to implement more cost effective city management styles.

"We were not very comfortable (with the ordinance introduced Nov. 16). We felt it was premature. There's a great deal of information that needs to be analyzed," said Dina Hunter, a former Upland councilwoman who co-chaired a chamber committee to study the cost-control plan.

"We have to be careful to do the most cost effective thing for the community," she added.

Mayor Richard G. Anderson

agreed that the ordinance's introduction was premature, calling it "not acceptable."

Anderson said that he wants to see the ordinance spell out the exact costs of user fees, rather than a percentage of costs the city plans to recoup through the fees.

"It could give departments carte blanche to continue to charge and reassess fees," he said. "If we have specific fees identified, then they'll have to go through the public hearing process to increase fees."

Monday's special hearing also was to address for the first time recommendations from the Parks and Recreation Department that state that the city should not comply with finance suggestions in the cost study.

City staff has recommended accepting the department's proposal to leave fee recuperation as it currently exists.

The late night meeting has also led to the city's dumping proposals to recoup fees for crossing guards because state law prohibits it and for notary fees, which are duplicated in another fee proposal.

Plans for assessment districts, however, will be put off until after the April 1988 elections so that the other cost-control measures can be implemented quickly and so that the current council will not have to address the matter, said Anderson.

"I don't care for the concept of the assessment district, so I don't think it will get an impartial hearing from me," said Anderson, who is stepping down as mayor in April.

Both council members and chamber representatives said that they were reasonably satisfied with the results.

CLASSES

Adult school

The Chaffey Adult School will be starting two beginning computer classes this month.

Introduction to word processing will be offered on Tuesdays and Thursdays and introduction to data base management will be offered on Mondays and Wednesdays.

These classes will be offered from 7 to 9 p.m. for 30 hours of instruction. Classes have begun.

There is an enrollment fee of $40 and a fee of $10 for materials. This is an opportunity to receive some important computer training that may assist in job advancement.

For information, call 983-2010.

The school also has a variety of class openings during the second quarter on the Alta Loma High School campus. Interested adults may register now at the Chaffey Adult School office located on the Chaffey High School campus, 211 W. Fifth St., near the corner of Euclid Avenue and Fifth Street.

Registration is from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. and from 6:30 to 9 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays and during the day only on Fridays. For more information, call 983-2010.

Some classes include:

- Beginning typing, Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.
- Intermediate typing, Tuesday and Thursdays from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.
- General auto repair and tune up, Thursdays from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.
- Woodworking, Mondays from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Expectant siblings

A class for children expecting a new brother or sister is being offered at Doctors' Hospital of Montclair on the first Monday of each month.

The class, called "Big Kids and Babies," is designed to make siblings more familiar with the hospital environment, and to learn what to expect from the new baby.

Participants will be taken on a tour of the maternity department, visit the nursery, and learn how to diaper and hold a baby. Each child will receive a coloring book and pen, and a certificate.

Each child must be accompanied by an adult.

There is a $5 fee for the class, and pre-registration is required. For more information or to register, call 625-8242.

Barren R.C. road will get facelift

By Lee Peterson

A barren stretch of road in Rancho Cucamonga that has been called an "eyesore" by nearby residents may soon get a facelift from City Hall.

Rochester Avenue between Base Line Road and Foothill Boulevard has always been bereft of landscaping and other amenities common to residential thoroughfares.

Now the city of Rancho Cucamonga will offer to foot the bill for the beautification of the stretch of road if the property owners in the housing tract along Rochester are willing to pay for the upkeep of the greenery.

Engineering department administrative analyst Duane Baker said the project will cost about $130,000. Those funds will be drawn from the city's beautification fund which is generated by development fees.

The assessment that each homeowner in the Rochester tract will have to pay is estimated at $8 to $12 annually, a fee that would be added to property taxes.

Rancho Cucamonga's City Council decided recently to first conduct a postal polling of the residents to find whether they were agreeable to the landscape assessment district charges.

The housing tract lies east of Rochester and consists of several hundred homes built one or two years before the city formed in 1977.

To the west of Rochester at that section is land which is part of Lewis Homes' Terra Vista planned community.

City officials said the Lewis firm has expressed an objection to having to pay for the landscaping and upkeep of Rochester.

The city has the option, however, of waiting until Lewis Homes eventually develops out to Rochester and then requiring the builders to landscape Rochester.

Several of the Rochester homeowners in attendance recently said the council's plan seemed like a good idea.

Ontarian has new mission to give medical aid via ship

By Suzanne Sproul

Sailing from exotic ports throughout the world was Tom Keegan's job and a big chunk of his life.

But while visiting the ports and getting to know some of their people, much of the exotic nature wore off.

"There are so many people in this world who have never and will never see a doctor. There are physicians, but in most places, say South America, they're in big cities, far from people in the outlying areas," said the Ontario resident.

About two years ago, Keegan skippered a donated off-shore supply boat to Haiti, laden with 300 tons of donated wheat to feed the hungry.

"This just tears me up because these kids didn't ask to be born into these conditions," said Keegan while viewing a videotape of the trip which pictured children supported by humanitarian aid in Haiti from the United States and those not yet sponsored.

His new mission, of sorts, is to help man and equip a ship to provide medical assistance to all those in need in Mexico and South America. Keegan is the founder and chairman of Project Hospital Ship Oceanic Inc., a California based non-profit public benefit corporation.

"The idea came to be simply because I was bored. I've been building the same model ship for the past three years. I was tired of laying around in bed," said Keegan, who was injured in a Mt. Baldy motorcycle accident about four years ago.

The accident left him with a broken back and a dramatic change in lifestyle. Any thoughts of returning to the sea life he loved seemed unattainable. But after treatment at San Bernardino Community Hospital and help from West Valley friends, including Upland attorney Thomas Moga, Keegan now is able to get around through the help of a wheelchair.

"I'm very lucky because every time I think about not walking I think of the guys at the hospital who can't move at all. Walking is the least of my problems.

"In my life I have seen people who have never ever seen a doctor let alone get any medical help. I wanted to use what I knew how to do, that is take a vessel from point A to point B, and use my EMT (emergency medical technician) knowledge to help. Some of the children in this world simply don't have a chance," he said.

Project Hospital Ship Oceanic is designed to involve the use of a medically equipped boat to help people and to hopefully break down some barriers between people, he said.

Testing urged for blood transfusion patients

By Diana E. Lundin

Patients who received blood transfusions in hospitals between 1978 and 1985 may want to consult their physicians regarding an AIDS test, two health groups said.

"We don't want to alarm the public because the likelihood is slim — maybe one in 50,000 to 200,000," said Deanne LaRue, communications director for the Hospital Council of Southern California.

"But if you've gotten a blood transfusion between 1978 and March 1985, you might want to talk to your doctor about an AIDS test," she said.

The Hospital Council and the Los Angeles County Medical Association this week issued a joint general advisory suggesting patients who received blood consider an HIV — human immunodeficiency virus — antibody test.

LaRue said some hospitalized patients may not have known they received blood.

"It can happen," she said. "A lot of times when people are in the hospital, they don't have the time or inclination to find out they received a transfusion."

Dr. Samuel R. Johnson of San Bernardino County's Public Health Department concurs with the recommendation of the two health organizations.

"We think it's necessary for people who received transfusions during that period of time to know what their antibody status is," he said.

Johnson said patients could carry the AIDS virus without becoming ill and unknowingly pass it on to either sexual partners or those they may share a needle with.

"The advisory is made with the welfare of the public's health in mind," he said. If a patient is referred by his physician, the hospital will draw blood for the HIV antibody test.

Confidentiality is very strict, Berens said, with only a coded number assigned to the blood sample. The sample is sent to the Blood Bank of San Bernardino-Riverside Counties for testing and a $10 handling fee would be charged to the patient.

Free testing is done at the county Health Department's alternate test sites, with one site located in Ontario.

Richard Forrester, administrator of both Doctors' Hospital of Montclair and Ontario Community Hospital, said, "I wouldn't want to create a panic, but they are reputable organizations and I would certainly support their recommendations."

The group, including physicians and dentists from Loma Linda University and the University of Southern California, is seeking to raise a $10,000 down payment on a 200-foot tuna clipper out of San Diego.

"Some of the medical and dental equipment has been donated. It has space for four operating rooms. We have well-known and able physicians and dentists ready to volunteer.

"The boat will cost a total of $450,000 over five years and the $10,000 down payment is returnable after one year if the project isn't moving.

"I will captain the boat. The potential here is tremendous in that the work we're going to be able to do will not only help people but will reflect the expertise of the doctors here in Southern California and the willingness of Americans to help in South America," he said.

Politics aside, Keegan said the only way to peace is through people helping people.

"Show someone how to drive a John Deere tractor or show them how to grow corn or peas and you've got a friend. Who knows one of the guys you help may be the next president of Mexico for instance?" he said.

Eventually Keegan would like to have a fleet of six ships serviced and ready to help the needy.

"You think about Greenpeace who raises $13 million a year to help save whales. Now there's nothing wrong with that but we could save a hell of a lot of ourselves, humanity, with that amount of money.

"It would cost about $1,000 a day to run the ship and that's just for feed and fuel. This is voluntary. But we figure we could give 18,000 kids inoculations in a 90-day tour; we could have four to six cataract surgeries a day; and we could do three cleft palates or plastic surgeries a day.

"We also want to go down there and set up clinics and then go back every six months to check up on their progress. One ship alone could serve nine targeted communities. It is not any good if you go down there and just give a guy an aspirin. You have to help in more ways.

$7,000. The first study cost $3,000.

Board President Bill Alexander said it may be "throwing good money after bad" to pay for the new study until the voters have decided if they want a special paramedic tax.

"We know it's not going to be an inexpensive proposal. If the community says it is willing to pay extra for the service, OK," he said. Alexander said the district's budget is too tight to spend funds for a district-run paramedic program.

Latipow said the agreement to get bids is a compromise. It allows the district to plan for the expense. In addition the district will ask the city of Rancho Cucamonga to help pay for the study.

"I think the only way to campaign for or against the issue is to get all the facts," Latipow said. The first study, he said, accomplished its goals of determining the most effective paramedic option — engine company medics.

Now that option needs to be fully examined. "How much will it cost, how many people, where will they be stationed, what are the overhead and maintenance costs" would be components of the analysis, he said.

But Alexander said he isn't likely to support the study.

"I really hate to see us spend a whole lot of money on studies on something the community doesn't want," Alexander said.

The city of Rancho Cucamonga currently is served by private paramedic squads from Mercy Ambulance.

Proposed day care center in R.C. may be possible

By Lee Peterson

The door will not be slammed shut on a proposed private day care center in Rancho Cucamonga — at least not by current ordinances.

The Planning Commission did not intend to exclude such facilities from the Victoria planned community when the master plan was adopted, according to the city's research of its records.

When the La Petite Academy initiated plans to build a day care center nestled in residential Victoria and was challenged by residents, the City Council voted to examine the history of the master plan in hopes of uncovering the specific intent of the former planning board.

City officials said Tuesday that City Attorney James Markman did not find that the commission intended to deny the installation of day care centers in lots designated "community facility."

This determination does not preclude the City Council from deciding to eventually disapprove the La Petite project, or from imposing a conditional use permit process on the master plan.

In order to obtain the permit, the company would have to comply with any conditions of approval that the city could decide upon.

Community Development Director Jack Lam said cite employees are working on an ordinance which will force planned community projects like churches and private schools to undergo the conditional use process.

City Planner Brad Buller recommends that the permit process be instituted. He believes it is the best method for dealing with preschool and day care projects.

Buller said he will review the architectural plans for the center after the City Council has once again broached the issue at tonight's session.

Jim Bailey of the William Lyon Co., the developer of Victoria, said he saw no reason why the project should not proceed as planned.

Bailey said the opposition against the project by some residents in Victoria was a "misunderstanding."

Residents told city leaders they were upset with the developer for selling the 1.85 acre parcel on North Windrows Loop to the day care company after they had expected a church to be erected on the site.

Bailey said he tried for two years to interest a church in the property — which is reportedly selling for $300,000 — but most found the site too small.

Eventually the La Petite project was conceived.

Bailey said he had been told by the city's planning staff all along that the day care facility would be an approved use for the parcel.

He said the company can't afford to keep the property off the market indefinitely.

Sheriff's station hours may be extended

Rancho Cucamonga city officials are considering extending the hours of the sheriff's substation to a 24-hour basis.

Currently the station at 9333 Ninth Street is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. Deputies who patrol after those hours still are based at the station, but the doors are locked.

City officials said there are funds in the city's budget to provide for the extra hours, and the added locks and safety glass at the station.

Rancho Cucamonga Mayor Dennis L. Stout said the extension of hours is long overdue. "I think it's ridiculous to have a police department in a city of this size that closes its doors at 5 p.m.," Stout said.

Station commander Capt. Eugene Gilmore said the switchover to 24-hours would take about two months to allow time for hiring of extra clerks and installation of safety locks and glass.

The proposal requires City Council approval.

Peggy Robbins voted to panel post

The Montclair Community Action Committee voted in Peggy Robbins as chairwoman recently, replacing the 1987 chairwoman Lola Kiey.

Lane Snyder replaces Jim Berg as vice chairwoman.

Both Robbins and Snyder have been active in various committee programs, including the volunteer recognition program. They also served as members of the Montclair Committee for the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution.

County suit blames maker of laser gun

By Lee Peterson

Responsibility for the shooting death of Rancho Cucamonga resident Leonard J. Falcon rests with the manufacturer of the toy gun the victim carried, according to San Bernardino County.

In response to a lawsuit brought by Falcon's parents against the Sheriff's Department, the county has filed a cross complaint claiming innocence.

Because the deputy who shot Falcon one night last April has been cleared by the department, the county said in the complaint filed Thursday in Fontana Municipal Court that the toy's maker is completely at fault.

Worlds of Wonder, the Fremont-based company that makes Lazer Tag, has not yet responded either to the Falcons' lawsuit or the cross complaint.

Falcon, 20, was playing the Lazer Tag game at Central Elementary School in Rancho Cucamonga with a friend the night of April 7, when a neighbor's suspicions were aroused and the police were called.

Sheriff's deputies, alerted to what was reported as two armed men on the campus, began searching the grounds.

Deputy Dan'l Durrant shot Falcon twice when he said the young man leaped out from behind some bushes and pointed the toy gun at the officer.

Durrant later was cleared by a review panel and promptly returned to duty.

The Falcon family is suing the county for alleged negligence in training the officer and Worlds of Wonder for alleged negligence in producing a toy which would leave its user in extreme peril.

The county is saying with its cross complaint that the Falcons and their lawyers are at least half right.

"The county is not at fault. I have no doubt in my mind that we did nothing wrong. To allow people to manufacture a toy gun that emits a muzzle blast-like light is wrong," said attorney George Franscell, who is representing the county.

"It should be easy to prove to a jury that the liability rests with the manufacturer," Franscell said.

Worlds of Wonder attorneys refused to comment Friday.
